Report to the Listener

Valerie van Isler, General Manager

"CONGRESS SHALL MAKE NO LAW RESPECTING AN ESTABLISHMENT OF RELIGION, OR PROHIBITING THE FREE EXERCISE THEREOF; OR ABRIDGING THE FREEDOM OF SPEECH, OR OF THE PRESS.."

The First Amendment

As Dr. Martin Luther King said so many years ago , "there will be difficult days ahead." The recent victory of the conservative right, mightily backed by the Christian coalition, who now control the Congress and many state houses, is ominous for all progressive people who have been working decades for s ocial change. One of the most serious consequences of this takeover of the American agenda by these anti-democratic forces is the direct threat this poses for public and community broadcasting all across the spec trum and all around the country. The danger to these "public airwaves and information channels" established by Congress itself in 1967 for television and radio, is very real. For community media it is even more perilous. The preservation and protection of our most basic liberties, especially freedom of the press, is at stake. Indeed, there will be very difficult days ahead in this new[t] world order.

WBAI-Pacifica Radio will celebrate our 35th anniversary of extraordinary programming and community service to the New York region in 1995. Pacifica and WBAI have always had a special responsibility in alternative broadcasting. Founder Lew Hill, who invented the concept of listener-supported, community media over forty years ago, knew that this would bring very difficult challenges and indeed, it has. We spoke "truth to power" and weathered the storms from the McCarthy period to the Reagan era. This time, when all of public broadcasting is under attack, the task is even greater. We need your help to protect all our rights.

At WBAI, we will continue our commitment to the free flow of information and a diversity of viewpoints as the very foundation of democracy. Don't let this new congress silence the people and stifle the truth. Your generous support is much more important than ev er before so that we can go on serving you for another three decades with award-winning programs in news, public affairs and arts.

This winter,' WBAI will be holding the 23rd Annual Holiday Crafts Fair at Columbia University in Ferris Booth Hall. Long recognized as one of the finest craft ev ents in the country, over 200 artists from around the country will join us for two weekends on December 9-11 and December 16-18 for this New York holiday tradition. This year, the project includes a weekend of special events and concerts by such outstanding artists as The Mighty Sparrow, Dick Gregory and Odetta together with Gary Null, Prof. Michael Parenti, Barbara Ehrenreich, Jo Willard and others. See you at the Fair and please join us for these special holiday events. From all of us at WBAI, we wish you and your loved ones the blessings of the season and a happy, peaceful holiday. ✞

1:00 - 3:00 pm The X-XMas Show Seasons Beatings! Isn't that how you feel after you've been assaulted by every retail establishment in the city, state and country? Whether it's Telemarketing, Junk Mail or some jerk dressed up in a Santa out-fit handing out coupons for things you absolutely don't need, IT SUCKS! Do you think it's fair that our culture expects you to genuflect to the free market enterprises that attempt to control our minds through brutal and relentless advertising? Isn't it strange that all of this marketing is couched in the soft and fluffy appearance of a religious holiday? Damn-it, you don't have to take it! Stand up for yourself. Don't buy into it. Peace and goodwill for mankind should be a year-round concept, not an annual slogan used to boost the ratings of the closing quarter of the stock market. Wake up on December 25 and don't celebrate Xmas. You deserve better! Celebrate your resistance to this pathetic so-called holiday with the X-Xmas Show. Produced by Paul Ruest and Steve Ward
3:00 - 6:00 pm the Golden Age of Christmas Special Out, out, damned Grinch! Make way for Max Schmid, who, despite his cynical and gruff demeanor, will prove again this afternoon that he's really a sucker for sentimental Holiday slop from days gone by. And to prove it, he is busier than Santa's elves rounding up all-new Christmas episodes of such classic radio comedies as Our Miss Brooks, Fibber McGee & Molly, The Great Gildersleeves, and Jack Benny, as well as a drama or two, including The Whistler and Quiet Please. So gather 'round the tree with Grandma and the kids, stare into the twinkling lights, and share the fun!

Welcome to the 23rd Annual WBAI Holiday Crafts Fair!

Thank you for joining us this year at the WBAI Holiday Crafts Fair and for contributing to the ongoing success of our fair. With much help from the WBAI staff, volunteers, WBAI exhibitors and friends, we have been working towards this special event all year and look forward to presenting to you some of the finest, handmade works in the country.

At our 23rd Annual Fair, you will find those brilliant, unique gifts that you have been searching for made by over 200 juried artists from all over the country. You can browse through classical and contemporary jewelry, handwoven clothing, turned wood vessels, blown glass, leather work and much more. The Crafts Fair runs for two consecutive weekends: December 9, 10 & 11 and December 16, 17 & 18. Each week of the fair will feature new artists, so plan on visiting us both weekends, as there are unlimited entry passes available at the door.

While you walk through the Crafts Fair, be sure to stop by the:

- Holiday Crafts Fair Raffle (opposite coat check) with works of art donated by exhibitors. List of prizes available.
- WBAI Gift/Authors' Table (at the entrance of Wollman Auditorium) with the latest in books, publications, tapes and other items of memorabilia. Stop by and meet your favorite radio personalities!
- Russell Donnellon, guitarist, will be performing throughout the fair at the top of the main staircase.
- Have your presents wrapped at our Gift Wrap Service on the first floor.

Please stop by and say hi! It would be a pleasure to meet all of you. Thank you for your support of the crafts community and non-commercial radio, WBAI-FM.

Happy Holidays!

Growing up with Stephanie: Work, Childhood Lessons, and Myths

by Cristina and Lorka Muñoz

Stephanie Muñoz, who was Subscriptions Manager at WBAI Radio in the early 1970s, died of a cerebral hemorrhage on October 1, 1994, at the age of 49. Those of us who worked at WBAI in those days remember Steffi's laughter resonating late into the night through the basement of the church on East 62nd Street. Steffi had a razor-sharp mind and boundless energy, a profound passion for justice and a shrewd and feisty pragmatism. Results were what mattered to Steffi, and she almost always got them. After leaving WBAI, Steffi poured her energy into the East Harlem Community where she lived most of her adult life--leading, teaching, making things better. For many years, she was also a dynamic single mother. Anyone who knew Steffi in the old days also knew her two miniature assistants, Lorka and Cristina. They have written the following remembrance of their mother for the Folio.

Bruce Soloway

"A hundred years from now it will not matter what my bank account was, the sort of house I lived in or the kind of car I drove. But the world may be different because I was important in the life of a child."

As we chronologically move further and further away from childhood, we are often faced with stark revelations that change the way we perceive the world. Who could ever forget saying: "What do you mean there's no Easter Bunny?" or "It really wasn't the tooth fairy that put the quarter under my pillow?" There are an endless number of childhood beliefs that seem to evaporate as our parents slowly prepare us for the real world. Many of those childhood beliefs are not stories told to us by our parents of chubby men in red suits climbing down the chimney, but instead they are simply harmless inaccuracies which as we grow up, become part of our belief system. Every family owns its own unique set of myths or misconceptions in understanding that they carry around with them until some kindly person or event corrects the misunderstanding. This essay shares with you, the reader, the lessons our mother, Stephanie Muñoz, taught my sister and me, and the myths that spring from growing up in the Muñoz family.

Myth # 1. WBAI: All Radio Stations Operate out of Old Churches

Some of my endless memories of childhood involve 'BAI. I remember it was the first time my mother, Stephanie, was allowed to bring my sister and me to work with her. It was the early 70s and the station was located in an old church on East 62nd Street. Weren't all radio stations located in churches? At the time, I remember thinking how neat it would be to have a real job, like my mother had. After all, everyone at her job treated and spoke to my sister and I, a five- and a seven-year-old, like we were adults. At 'BAI, my sister and me got our first lesson in responsibility, contribution and, most importantly, how to get a five-hour project completed in two hours. Steffi began at 'BAI as the subscriptions registrar (i.e., director of direct mail fundraising). Organizing and completing huge mailings were (and probably still are) part of the subscription manager's job. However, in those days we didn't have the super-fast folding machines or computers that printed out thousands of labels in a matter of minutes. Usually volunteers and staff worked way into the night to get the mailings out. Steffi made this fun for everyone involved. How fast could we fold, staple, lick and seal? Who would win the world's record? It didn't matter how long it took us as long as we helped. I will always carry with me this special work ethic that my mother taught me. No matter how boring the job, it can be fun and it will get done.

Myth # 2. Union Settlement: All Kids Call Their Parents by Their First Names and Ms. Does Not Literally Mean 'Mind Your Own Business'

After working at the station for several years, Steffi took over as Acting Station Manager for 'BAI. Once a permanent replacement was found, she got a job closer to home in East Harlem. She began this new adventure of work at a community organization, Union Settlement, which would forever change her life. At Union Settlement, Steffi administered and taught in various training programs. She demonstrated through work that given the right kind of support, individuals can make positive changes in their lives. Class after class of medical transcribers and dental hygienists graduated and were placed in jobs throughout the city. Like 'BAI, the adults also treated us and spoke to us as adults. Work with Step was always more than a job. The folks she worked with were like family to us. Because Union Settlement also offered many after-school and summer programs, we also met lots of kids at her job. I'll never forget how many kids at Union Settlement asked me why I called my mother by her first name. After all, wasn't that her name?

Myth # 3. Community Involvement: Saturdays and Evenings Are for Painting Murals, Passing Out Political Campaign Literature and for Attending Community Meetings Where Grownups Yelled a Lot

Every time I get off the East River Drive at 106th Street, I see the stop sign that my mother fought to have installed at the end of the exit ramp. The stop sign is on the same corner where I went to elementary school. I can't remember a time when my mother wasn't involved with some community group or activity to make our neighborhood a better place to live. Steffi took both my sister and me along to almost all of her community meetings. I actually believed for a while that some grownups only knew how to communicate by screaming at one another. Not Steffi. She believed that change came from doing and that screaming didn't communicate what you wanted to see happen or changed. Steffi became involved with anything which she had a vested interest in. At our day care center, she eventually became Chairman of the Board of Directors. She also became Secretary of the Board of our apartment co-op, Franklin Plaza. From the late 70s to the early 80s, she was a member of Community School Board # 4 and Community Planning Board # 11. The folks at Union Settlement even asked her to become a member of the Board of Directors when her employment with them ended. She loved East Harlem. She moved there because it is a community and it was where she wanted to raise her children. It is a place where she has left her mark--literally.

20 years later, there is still a mural on the wall of the day care center we attended. It is filled with rainbows and other shapes utilizing bright happy colors. When we started there, there were no plants or animals and the play equipment had lots of rough hard edges. She literally helped to change our environment. Steffi never took public credit for projects she was involved with. It was often difficult for those involved to remember who had the initial vision for the project. She had this way of helping everyone believe it was theirs.

Myth # 4. East Harlem Music: All Men Are Bug Holes

In 1978, while my sister and I were taking music lessons at the East Harlem Music School, my mother met Johnny Colon. John had recently started a program where kids from East Harlem could take music lessons in a wide range of instruments totally free of charge. However, this generosity also took its toll. The school was an administrative mess. "You want a volunteer?" my mother asked. Soon volunteer work turned into administrative work and before I knew it, my mother was the Executive Director of the agency. As Executive Director, Steffi expanded the school to include job training programs, and finally in the 1980s, a G.E.D. program. All the while keeping under wraps her growing relationship with John. "What do you mean you like him!!!" My mother, sister and me were like the three Musketeers; there was no room for a fourth. And anyway, all men were bug holes. We didn't need a man in our lives no matter how great he was and no matter how much we all laughed when we were together. My sister and me plotted against John. We wanted him out of the picture at all costs. John put up with this for many years. One day, I'm not really sure of the exact date, we realized perhaps he was ok. After all, he had bought shares in our chocolate chip cookie company, and didn't complain when he didn't get any dividend or cookies. Besides, he was the only one who stuck around after years of childhood pranks. And, more importantly, he loved my mother and she loved him. On a windy November afternoon in 1983, John and Steffi were married.

Myth # 5. The High School: We Don't Have Anything in Common with the Kids Who Attend the High School

Steffi completed her Master's in Social Work at New York University in May of 1989 as a full-time student, all the while continuing her full-time position as the Executive Director of the Music School. In 1990, Steffi founded the High School component of the East Harlem Music School that used music and counseling as a vehicle for reaching at-risk youth. Her work with the high school students was the culmination of over 25 years of work. It was probably her most favorite job because it seemed that she spent the day and nights with the kids. I remember being jealous of how much attention she gave the kids. When I graduated from college, I realized that I had Steffi and these kids needed her. In 1992, she invited Lorka and me to come back to New York and speak to her students about going to college. I didn't think I had anything to share with them. What could we possibly have in common? Steffi said, "come and just talk." I did. As we sat in a big circle, I realized that I too had been one of these kids. We were all children of East Harlem. We were raised to be fighters, and were street smart. This gave us an advantage on the world if we chose to use it. I explained to the students that "there are lots of people in the world who will tell you that you can't make it." I told them the only person they had to worry about was themselves. They had to believe that they could do it. Lorka and I countered every excuse they gave for not being able to go to college with a better one. Lorka said to one student, "ok, so you missed 30 days of school. Well, I missed the whole tenth grade!" Steffi invited us back to their graduation. Six out of seven students went on to college. Steffi believed in everyone. She gave them a chance and helped them to believe in themselves. This is the gift she gave them, and my sister and me.

Myth # 6. You Can Do Anything You Want If You Try Hard Enough, and Members of My Family Don't Die Until They Are Very Old (At Least 90)

My sister and me had long moved away, each of us following paths that Steffi helped build for us. We are both practicing in our professional and personal lives Steffi's approach to life: you can do anything you want, and you can have an impact on the day-to-day lives of everyday people. I am finishing my Ph.D. in political science and my sister has been running a neighborhood community gardening outreach program for the past five years.

Steffi raised us to be independent, and celebrated our uniqueness. She helped me develop certain skills and helped Lorka develop a completely different set of skills. We both learned Steffi's approach to dealing with life. First, have a plan. Evaluate the problem and list possible options. Choose one. Roll up your sleeves and get to work. Be prepared to alter your plan based on new information. Most importantly, laugh when it gets too serious, and use every failure as an opportunity to learn something. We believed that if we practiced these concepts, we could literally do anything. And we were living proof of it.

On a Friday night this past September, both of us received a call. Steffi had had a cerebral aneurysm, and was in a coma. I drove up from Washington, and my sister flew in from Ohio with her 17-month-old son. We looked at this as any other challenge, rolled up our sleeves and divided the work. At Flushing Hospital, we learned to communicate with the medical profession despite their refusals to allow us to be active participants in Steffi's care. We struggled with their passive attitude regarding her treatment and prognosis. After all, there was a small chance for recovery, and they didn't know what we knew--that we had won bigger battles before. There was proof of our victories all over East Harlem. Steffi was transferred to one of 12 beds at the top hospital in the US. for aneurysms--Columbia Presbyterian. She began receiving the most aggressive care possible. We also kept her professional life going, and helped the school and its two programs adapt to her probable long-term absence.

When the doctors said it would take a miracle, we looked all over New York for anyone selling them. During Steffi's last night, the celestial mobile we purchased made rainbows in the air as the light hit it. Cristina waved the magic wand that we had purchased since it was the closest thing to a miracle we could find. We sang songs to Steffi, and read her the story Lorka had written about our life together with the fourth musketeer, John. She passed away sometime during the night. She didn't have a savings account, and her checking account was literally at zero. She had put the house on Pleasant Avenue up against a debt that the Music School owed. She didn't have a car or very many fancy things.

At her memorial service, held in the "Friends style," Courtney Bradshaw stood up and said, "Steffi helped me to turn my life around." Courtney is finishing up his second year at Antioch College in Yellow Springs, Ohio. He is a graduate of the Music School's alternative high school program. Because of Steffi, he learned how to help himself. He stopped dealing drugs on the corner, and is now getting straight A's in school, and has a bright future. Through all this, we learned that Stephanie Muñoz was a "clear-eyed revolutionary who changed the world, block by block, person by person."

Talk! In the Morning

by Prairie Miller

In a media dominated by men and the male point of view, women's programming holds its own on the show Talk! In the Morning. Airing Sundays from five to seven a.m., Talk! In the Morning not only champions a profoundly partisan feminist point of view on all vital issues of the day, but it has provided a haven and a platform for myself and other nomadic women's voices and visions at WBAI.

What Do These Women Do Best in the Morning?
Talk!--Sundays 5:00 - 7:00 am

The hosts on Talk! In the Morning are seasoned WBAI commentators–Mary Ann Miller and Patricka Dallas. Mary Ann runs a bookstore in the East Village and is a long-time community activist around women's issues. Patricka, who has worked in nearly every capacity at the station, from News to Public Affairs, brings to WBAI her well honed skills in broadcast journalism, from 60 Minutes to Hard Copy, to Time Warner and the United Nations. A contemporary renaissance woman who hails from Jamaica, Patricka appeared as an actress in Spike Lee's "Malcolm X" and directed "Heart of the Matter," an award winning play presented at the Village Gate last year. The play focused on the universal problems of divorce and how it can destroy the lives of mothers and children.

Adamant about maintaining this designated sanctuary for feminist expression on the air, where the participation of all WBAI women has always been enthusiastically welcomed, Patricka explained, "Without women's programming in its outlet on Talk! In the Morning, the radio would be like the rest of the world–run mainly by men. Such a space for women is essential not only because we happen to be the majority of the world population, the core of the family and, in effect, the womb of the earth. But without women's programming, as elsewhere in life, there is an absence of values of nurturing, sensitivity, and basically bringing out the important feminine side in men, which can only be achieved when we are allowed to be equal partners."

If you're not a particularly morning person and, like Dracula, do not take easily to the first light of dawn, Talk! In the Morning eases you out of slumber with mellow women's music and Mary Ann's unique early morning horoscope and occult report about where the moon is and how it affects you. If you've already tuned in to the show, you may have caught some of the extraordinary features that are actively solicited from female producers at WBAI. This has included Marjorie Moore on the environment, Olga Rodriguez in a very compelling interview with Isabel Allende, and Dallas Galvin's fine interviewing skills. Recently, Marina Ortiz and Annette Walker brought Latina women from Heresies magazine to talk about a special issue devoted to Latina poets and writers. Patricka's report on South Africa and on-location coverage of the Arab-Israeli conflict, with a focus on women's reactions and participation from both sides, stirred the airwaves. And Reel Women Radio has found a regular home on the show for myself and my partner in crime, Sherry Weiner, for uncompromising film criticism with a unique feminist and political edge.

Talk! In the Morning has built up by word of "mouth" a solid and faithful listenership, with its fresh and innovative variety of programming. The show works, mainly because it lives up to its Folio blurb, making good on its promise to Talk! about critical issues regarding "consumerism, feminism, sexism, racism, health tips, antidotes and anecdotes," all with a healthy dose of women's ideas. Stay tuned for proposed upcoming programs on environmental racism, the death penalty, and an interview with Winnie Mandela. The bottom line is that if it's new and if it's current, you can rest assured it will be on Talk! In the Morning. At the same time, the program continues to encourage input and contributions from all women, fired with the conviction that to "air" is human, but unforgivingly and divinely female as well!
